

THIS BANK FORGER POSED IN SOCIETY

Capt. Trelawney, Who Says He Was a British Army Officer, Is Arrested After a Long Search.

COSTLY HOME UNPAID FOR?

Pinkertons Who Trail Him Down Declare He Is the Most Successful Man in His Line in This Country To-Day.

Charles H. Trelawney, the Philadelphia printer and publisher, who was arrested yesterday on a charge of forgery made by James V. Lott, cashier of the Mercantile National Bank, was arraigned before Magistrate O'Brien in the Tombs Court to-day and pleaded not guilty. Trelawney consented to an adjournment until Tuesday morning next, and a $5000 bail was fixed. Trelawney said:

"I wish to deny that the police were compelled to break into my house, as has been reported. When the knock came to the door I was busy caring for my four-year-old daughter, who was asleep in my arms. Hearing the knock, I went to the child's room and placed her carefully on the bed in order not to awaken her. A moment later the police had forced an entrance to the cellar and I saw them mounting the cellar stairs."

"On Tuesday I spent the whole day gardening in the immediate vicinity of the house, so you can see I was not shut up in the house. I can meet the charge at the proper time. I am innocent of any wrong and wish to say that I am being made a scapegoat by conspirators."

Trelawney was taken back to the Tombs.

His arrest brought to light the fact that he has been living in magnificent style, posing as a society leader, building his own home and furnishing it with the most costly fittings.

Officials of the Mercantile National Bank say that Trelawney induced them to cash for him on April 24 a note for $12,500, purporting to have been signed by Simon Shoninger, a piano maker of New Haven, Conn. The note was sent to Shoninger's bank for collection on July 15 and was pronounced a forgery.

A similar note for a like amount, was cashed by the Camden National Bank last year and an indictment was found against Trelawney and he was arrested but escaped from an officer who had him in charge in Philadelphia.

Long Sought Him. Since then the Pinkertons have been looking for him and the recent note case gave them their clue that he was in New York. They found that he had built there a large house, on fashionable Ridge Drive, Lower Park; that he had induced the builders and architects to accept notes which they could not collect, and later it was found that chattel mortgages were on file for most of the furnishings in his house.

He called his wife, "Trelawney," and did not even change his own name. He introduced himself to his fashionable neighbors as was welcomed as a man of evident refinement and wealth and as a war hero. He told about his rich aristocratic relatives in Wales and of how he fought all through the Boer war as a British captain. He has one blue eye and the remaining eye is injured. He limps and carries a cane, and in explaining the matter merely says:

"It amounts to nothing. Just a Boer war. They fell in front of me, you know."

He was found Monday by the detectives, and since then a watch has been kept on "Trelawney" that he did not escape. He became aware of the detectives' presence and remained indoors, while his wife out. She is a beautiful young woman with two young and attractive children.

Watch the House. Warrants for Trelawney's arrest were served out yesterday and the Pinkertons went to Lower Park. They found the house closed, and the servants refused to admit them. A basement window was broken and the detectives went up through the house to the top floor, where they found Capt. Trelawney barricaded in a small room with a great mass of furniture. He was busy destroying letters and papers. When the officers had torn down the last barrier he had complete control of everything except a book of blank notes and a rubber stamp. He had burned the fac-simile of Shoninger's signature. Mrs. Trelawney became hysterical when the police took her husband away. She sobbed violently and held to him until she was dragged out of the house.

The Pinkertons say they will now be able to explain many forgeries which have heretofore remained a mystery.

"SUICIDE" STOPS AN EXPRESS TRAIN.

Farmer Hung from Mail Crane in Order to Get On Express.

WINSTED, Conn., July 23.—As the New York express on the Central New England Railway, which leaves here at 7:40 A. M., was approaching the flag station at West Norfolk yesterday, Engineer William A. Hearn saw a man hanging to the mail crane in front of the station. His first thought was that the man had committed suicide, and he feared the body would be badly torn when the mail train came to a stop. He shut off steam and applied the air-brake. When the train came to a stop, the man released his grip on the crane and jumped to the ground and toward the train. The man, who said he was a farmer, refused to divulge his name, told the disgusted trainmen that he had hung to the mail-crane by his hands so the engineer would see him and stop the train. A brakeman warned the farmer against repeating the performance, as he said the next time the engineer might catch him and dash out his brains.

Sunday Outings to Mameh Chank. Many Sunday excursions operated by the Lehigh Valley Railroad to Glen Echo and Mameh-Chank have become extremely popular. The tickets cost a nominal price and take one to the beautiful lake and the return to New York in the afternoon. The next excursion booked for Sunday, the 25th.

CHICOT SEEKS NOVELTY IN SUMMER VAUDEVILLE.

Real Actors Again Head the Bill This Week at Proctor's.

CHICOT.

Evidently a particularly large and eminently useful electric fan has been placed in the star dressing room of Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre. This is the second week running that the heat of the bill has been taken by real actors. This week it is a presentation of Julius Chambers' clever little comedy "A Pair of Boots" which attracts attention.

The sketch is not a new one, but is not a familiar offering, and it makes more or less of a departure from the conventional vaudeville vein. It is a yachting millionaire returns home to find a huge pair of boots placed outside the door of the hotel room. Arguing the worst, he proceeds to become tragic until the lady explains that it is merely a scheme to convince would-be burglars that there was a large and robust man inside.

Myron Calice is the tragic husband and gave a capital interpretation of the part, playing spiritedly but without overacting. Frank Weston was the friend and confidant of the outraged spouse and made an excellent foil. The one weak feature was Miss Leslie Bingham, who neither looked nor acted her part, and very nearly spoiled the climax. It is to be hoped that the Proctor people will keep the fan going all summer.

Rita Redmond appears in a scene with eight girls, more or less young and more or less plump. It is clearly apparent that much of this plumpness is left in the dressing rooms during the young women's hours of idleness. It is no uncommon thing for artifice to be called to nature's aid; but some of these eight American beauties are earnestly entreated to wake to a realization of the fact that there is some difference in shape between a calf pad and a boxing glove. They appear to be using the glove.

Three sets of scenery are used in the interpretation of four songs, and there are an equal number of changes of costume. These do not offer remarkable novelty, but they form a pretty act, and one which pleases the eye. Miss Redmond seems a little strange in the solo part, as yet, and should bring to her work greater vivacity. At present she is entirely too placid, but she sings quite well. The act was put on by G. Von Palm.

Charles H. Sheffer and C. French Blakeley appear in an old negro skit. It is laughable in an old-fashioned way, but has been done before. There are many a modern sketch and even farces and there is still humor in some of the dialogue. In addition, C. French Blakeley contributes a banjo solo and both of them sing.

Kennedy and Evans offer the opposite line of work and present an Irish sketch contemporaneous with the one which Kennedy and Evans have had a number of partners and the act has been many vicissitudes. Incidentally there have been a few new jokes added from time to time, but it is the same old framework and eventually the same old sketch. They should add up nights for a couple of weeks putting in some new jokes.

Mary Madden comes forward in a comedy monologue, a strange but true that few women are able to entertain in a single talking speech. Miss Madden is by no means one of those few.

She opens with a little advice to girls on the subject of married husbands and making them after they have been secured. No feminine monologue is supposed to be so complete without this. Having made sacrifice to convention, she tells a few jokes which did not impress the audience in quite the same light, and she sings "Put Dresser's 'You're Just a Little Nigger'." It is a beautiful young woman with two young and attractive children.

comedian is quite tragic, while the pretended villain is extremely ridiculous. They may enjoy acting out upon a real stage, but they are contributing not at all to the elevation of that useful structure. The girl who takes the third part is as bad as the other two put together. Edward Horan in a search for novelty has hit upon the idea of doing the American burlesque in the wooden-soled shoes of Germany dressed as a Chinaman. The idea is at least a novelty, and Mr. Horan, who is a good dancer, has gone to the trouble of having a special scene painted showing the exterior of a Chinese temple. For the sake of a somewhat stale joke he hangs a telephone in the grove of the temple. If Mr. Horan can purchase a Chinese accent at the place where he bought his clothes he should invest immediately. He is a hard worker and offers several dances.

Marty Woodworth tries to convince the audience that he sings like a real negro and the kaleidoscope offers a number of pictures. The bill is quite a good one for this time of year.

These Shirts Are Too Good To Sell at This Price

The manufacturer was hard to convince that he should accept the price he did; and people who know good shirts insist that such excellent shirts should not be sacrificed at this little price.

But we have established a price precedent, and you may select from the choicest collection of Negligee Shirts we have yet offered, at the price we have made famous this year—

Sixty-five Cents Each

The materials are the best used in shirt-making at the regular prices. The patterns are exactly those that tasteful men most admire. The variety is practically unlimited. Of course the size-range is complete.

Think of the best shirts you've seen at $1, $1.50 and $2, and you'll not be disappointed in these we offer you at 65c each.

Ninth street side.

Here Are Doings In the Shoe Store!

There's a stir among the Men's and Women's Oxfords—a breaking camp preparatory to a quick march-out.

Certain lines, somewhat depleted, are not to be filled in again this summer, and they are slated for eviction at very much below their customary prices. The aggregate is large, and affords splendid choice for people who still need easy, stylish, splendidly-wearing Summer Shoes:

Men's $3 to $5 Oxford Shoes, Now $2.40

Six lines, including Blucher and Oxford the styles of patent coltskin, wax calf, Russian tan and velvet calf and black kidskin; all made up to linings and best upper leathers. Sizes are not complete, but some style has your size.

Women's $3 to $5 Oxford Shoes, Now $1.50

Small lots of fast-selling lines—all of the best grades and choicest materials; practically all sizes except in the broadest widths. Kidskin, patent leather, enameled leather—all of the best grades; mostly with welt soles, but some with thin turned soles.

Then here are some lively offerings of large lots in the Basement Store, of

Women's $2 Oxford Shoes at $1.25

Women's $2.50 and $3 Oxford Shoes at $1.50

A dozen styles to choose from, in all sizes and widths; and every pair sold with our regular guarantee of good service. Kidskin, with tips of patent leather or kid; heels high or low, soles light or heavy.
